MEDIA RELEASE

Sibanye-Stillwater launches new website

Johannesburg, 25 July 2019: Sibanye-Stillwater is pleased to announce the launch of its newly redesigned global website, www.sibanyestillwater.com, offering an interactive design, faster navigation and improved search. The new website features overviews of the Group's operations, contemporary audio-visual and multimedia content and streamlined resources for investors and stakeholders.

Following the successful completion of the acquisition of Lonmin plc and its associated mining, retreatment, smelter, base and precious metal refinery assets in South Africa in June 2019, Sibanye-Stillwater has become the world's largest primary producer of platinum, the second largest producer of palladium and the third largest producer of gold (on a gold-equivalent basis) from diversified operations spanning southern Africa and the Americas.

Neal Froneman, CEO of Sibanye-Stillwater, commented: "The integration of the former Lonmin operations (which, in the interim will be referred to as the "Marikana operations, while a stakeholder consultation process to determine the appropriateness of the nomenclature is undertaken") into the Sibanye-Stillwater Group, includes providing stakeholders with up-to-date, relevant and transparent information, consistent with the Group's existing communication practices and philosophy. Sibanye-Stillwater has transformed dramatically in the six years since it was formed and ensuring that all stakeholders are kept fully informed about the Group's activities, strategy and organisational culture remains a key business focus.

We are therefore pleased to launch our new website, which will provide visitors to our website with an engaging and easy-to-navigate way of learning more about the Group. The new website reflects the Group's leadership in the international precious metals markets. It also showcases the CARES values which continue to underpin our business as we grow – commitment, accountability, respect, enabling and safety – and highlights Sibanye-Stillwater's fundamental commitment to sustainability and innovative technologies across its global platform."
